E. F. Kellner returned a few days ago from a trip to Hot Springs, Ark., and St. Louis. He was greatly benefited by his stay at the Springs. Some features of the world's fair, he says are very fine, especially the government exhibits; but the show is too big to see properly unless one devotes a month or more to it.

Dr. L. M. Swikerath, optician of the German Optical Institute, 7 W. Adams street, Phoenix, will be at the Kinney house Aug. 13th, 14th and 15th only, with the most modern instruments for examining the eyes. If your eyes trouble you, or you need glasses of any description, see him while he is here.

In view of the evident fact that a knowledge of the Spanish language is fast becoming a necessary branch of commercial education in our Pacific states and territories, we are pleased to learn from Professor Swanwick that he continues to meet with good encouragement in his night classes; especially as we hear from several of those who are already taking advantage of his instruction, that they are well pleased with his practical and business-like mode of tuition. In this connection, we hope that his commercial classes, also, will meet with liberal patronage, as they afford an excellent opportunity for instruction, which our young men and women cannot afford to lose. The terms for any of the branches taught appear to be very reasonable, while the location of the class room in the Pioneer House company's building is certainly central and desirable. Mr. Swanwick's testimonials speak in the highest terms regarding his ability as an instructor.

Spanish in Our Public Schools

We have been shown a proposition addressed to our board of school trustees by Prof. T. F. Swanwick, by which it is proposed to inaugurate a Spanish class, open to all pupils who shall have advanced to the Seventh grade, with the approval of the trustees and school superintendent.

The terms proposed for this extra branch are certainly reasonable; and in view of its acknowledged necessity, in the high schools of our territory, we think that the parents and guardians of attending pupils, will do well to support the proposition, especially as it will not conflict with the regular course of class study.

THE GREAT AUTOPIANO

The most wonderful invention known. It will doubly pay any one to make a special trip to see the most wonderful of all pianos.

From time immemorial, the people in general have been lovers of music, the Piano being the instrument which in most cases offered the greatest possibilities and pleasure. But not until the Nineteenth Century were pianos brought to a state of perfection, and not until the end of the century was the Piano Player invented and perfected. The final stage of perfection, however, was not reached until the "Autopiano" made its entree and opened the way for all lovers of music to have a piano and player combined, making two instruments in one.

Ever since the introduction of the cabinet Piano Player, there has been a constant demand for a combination instrument. Realizing the importance of this demand, we have spent many months perfecting the "Autopiano," and in return have received the plaudits of not only the best musicians and piano manufacturers of this country, but those of Europe as well.

The key-board of the piano is in no way interfered with, and can be played manually at any moment. The "Autopiano," with its player action, gives you two instruments in one, economizing room, as it is no larger than the ordinary instrument. It also relieves you of the inconvenience of placing and taking away the old style cabinet player.

One of the charms of the "Autopiano" lies in the fact that there exists absolutely nothing, musically, beyond its reach. Its flexible fingers operated by the pneumatics are equally as sensitive as the human touch.

The Player is so completely under the control of the operator, that he can at will bring out the thundering tones of a Rubenstein, or the singing and delicate tones of a Paderewski.

Ask to see it. Remember the place, third door south of the Bridge, on west side of Broad street. Store will be kept open every night until 9 o'clock.
